

Introduction to The Gospel of John

Authorship of the Gospel of John

The true author of the Gospel is the Holy Spirit, who gave what to write to the right person, here, to John the apostle, the son of Zebedee.

About John's Gospel

The Gospel of John has placed many gaps of time between verses. All readers must link the verses carefully. Some verses in a chapter will relate to earlier chapters, and some will look to later chapters; the Gospel of John is unique. The Lord uses this Gospel in talking to a different class of people. Some verses in this Gospel are also found in other Gospels and help resolve issues. For example, another Gospel records the same event but is incomplete, and this Gospel will help us understand that event in the other Gospel. Still, in another Gospel, we can use John's Gospel to fill the gaps in that Gospel as well, and also in this Gospel, many gaps have opened the way for all to meditate and seek help from the beloved Son of God to understand. John's Gospel emphasizes glorifying the beloved Son of God. In this Gospel, John has clearly taught the Trinity of God. Anyone who has questions about the Trinity of God should come and seek the answer from John's Gospel.
